off his Cap, kneeled down, and the Uſher of the Black Rod taking Aſſay of the Offering, delivered it upon his Knee to the Duke of Argyll, who alſo kneeling gave it to the Sovereign, who put it, (being Gold and Silver) into the Baſon held by two Prebendaries ſtanding within the Rails.

The Sovereign then aroſe, put on his Cap, and made forthwith his Reverence to the Altar, and repeated it at the Bottom of the Steps, and was conducted back in the ſame Manner; the Lord Chamberlain in the Return, when he came to his own Stall, retired under his Banner, making his Obeyſances; and the Sovereign at the Steps of his Royal Stall made his Reverence to the Altar, and repeated the ſame after he aſcended his Stall, and then ſat down.

The Attendants upon the Sovereign in this Oblation made the like Reverences to the Altar, without any Obeyſance towards the Sovereign's Stall, becauſe the Sovereign was in the Proceſſion. The Duke of Argyll, who delivered the Offering to the Sovereign, returned to the Place under his Banner, where he made the uſual Reverences.

During the Time of the Sovereign's Return to his Stall, the Officers of the Wardrobe removed the upper rich Carpet and Cuſhion whereon the Sovereign kneeled, and the Uſher of the Black Rod returned, making his double Reverences in the Middle of the Choir, and ſtood before his Seat or Form.

Then two of the eldeſt Officers of Arms came down into the Middle of the Choir, and making their Reverences, went to the two eldeſt Knights, being Companions, and conducted them with the ſame Ceremonies to the Altar, where they offered in the ſame Manner, and were reconducted through the Stalls, (being then empty) who aſcending, made their Reverences upon their firſt Entry into theſe Stalls, and paſſed on to their own Stalls, where they did the ſame, and then ſat down.

The two next Heralds, with like Ceremonies conducted all the other Knights, beginning ſtill with the Senior by Election, who all offered ſingly, becauſe their Companions in the oppoſite Stalls were abſent.

The Companions being all thus reſeated in their Stalls, and the Officers of the Order ſeated upon their Forms, Divine Service proceeded; which being ended, the Prebendaries who officiated at the Altar were conducted by the Verger to their Seats.

The Poor Knights continued near the Rails of the Altar, and the Officers of Arms near them.

Garter then aroſe, and in the former Manner ſummoned down the Knights from their Stalls, beginning with the Junior Knight, who deſcended with the former Ceremonies, and ſtood under their reſpective Banners.

The Officers of the Order ſtood before their Forms.

The Poor Knights then came down two and two, and in a Body made their Obeyſances, and proceeded out of the Choir.

The Prebendaries came out of their Seats, and with the ſame Ceremonies, followed.

Then the Purſevants and Heralds in the like Method.

The Knights whoſe Companions were abſent, ſingly, and the two eldeſt Knights together, after making the like Obeyſances to the Altar, and then to the Sovereign in his Stall, proceeded out of the Choir, the Juniors going firſt.

Then the Officers of the Order.

The Sword of State born by the Duke of St. Albans.

The Sovereign making his Reverence to the Altar, deſcended from his Royal Stall, and at the Bottom of the Steps repeated his Reverence, and proceeded out of the Choir, his Train being carried as at his Entry.
